Are you ready to see the world we live in from a completely different perspective? Then this eye-opening book is for you!

By V.S.

In “Education Revolution”, the Australian writer, activist and teacher Will Stanton explores various controversial topics such as the monetary system and what’s behind it, the absence of critical thinking in today’s society, manipulation through mass-media and the advertising industry, the disconnection with nature and ourselves or the suppress of progress in various fields such as New Energy, Medicine or Technology. Stanton also talks about his own situation, shares his own personal experiences and explains how he got to the point where he decided to make a change in the education system. Throughout the book he outlines what is wrong about the current system, explains what has to be changed in order to take back our power and free ourselves from slavery and offers a clear solution in the end: The Six Dimension Model.

The only thing that requires getting used to is the writing style - Stanton addresses the reader on a very personal level, which most authors of non-fiction books don’t do, mostly to keep one’s professional distance. But first, this is a matter of taste and second, this book is different from all other non-fiction books, so Will Stanton consciously chose this personal writing style to be in line with the concept of his book: there already is enough separation in this world, yet when it comes down to it, we are all one. So why not try a new way and keep a book more personal?

I personally have enjoyed reading this book, because it gave me food for thought and I was able to find myself in many chapters. When I went to school, I wasn't satisfied with the system either which is why I dropped out of school earlier as it would have been "normal". If such an education system like the six dimension model existed at the time I went to school, I would have loved it! This concept totally resonates with the nature of us as human beings and nurtures all the abilities we need to feel wholly content in this world.

All in all, this is definitely a must-read for everyone interested in one of these topics. And for those who are not (yet): be open-minded and let Will Stanton show you how important it is to step into your power and release your true potential for this world!

It's time to teach our children how to think and give them back a world with a future.

By Lauren Allender

This remarkable young man's passion for humanity took him on a search for a deeper understanding of the systems that are controlling our globe.

Stanton's flowing style takes us to unexpected places but fills us with his passion for change.

This is a very accessible read and covers a broad range of topics from banking and thought control to sacred geometry and the infinite cosmos, the degradation of our earth, alternative fuel sources. the pharmaceutical industry and conscious awareness.

We are led to his epiphany where he realises that the way to shift this quagmire of deceit is to change the education system.

Stanton creates a six dimension model for education.

"All of the dimensions, self-discovery, inquiry, sustainability, innovation, communication and empathy, should be treated equally."

He invites us to participate in the development of this model and collaborate for the sake of our children.

This is not just a book for parents making choices for education but also for the awakening public who realise enough is enough. Time for change.

The world is hungry for young people like Will Stanton that dare to make a difference and push us out of our comfort zone.
