Sameer, the only person she has ever loved is unaware of the fact that the ceremony may cause serious repercussions in their lives. On board to Ajmer she meets Sohard, Sameer’s half-brother and they initiate a chain of memories which leaves Riya in a reverie. But even after 2 years since the fated ceremony she has not been able to let love flow out of her heart, which is evident from the way her heart beats when she hears the same ringtone as was attached to Sameer’s name before things took a turn to the unknown and never ending hollowness.

this novel is wonderful piece of writing

By anjan

The author proclaimed that it is her first novel, but the level of curiosity remains high throughout, showing maturity of the author. The novel starts as an ordinary train journey, but it becomes interesting with mental turmoils, memories and emotional ups and downs...

Except a few punctuation and grammatical liberties (may be common and unnoticeable for younger generations), this novel is wonderful piece of writing. Only one sentence can tell it all, "It is worth buying".
